OUR COMMUNITY IMPACT

Focusing on financial stability, school readiness, and connected community, the United Way of Greater Charlottesville partners with solution-oriented organizations and commits resources to initiatives that address disparities in equity and opportunity at scale.

We target the systems and structures that hinder our neighbors from scaling and thriving economically in Charlottesville and the surrounding area with the goal of reducing poverty in our community.
At the United Way of Greater Charlottesville, we believe that when people from all backgrounds come together, the result is a stronger, more vibrant community.

How do we do this? Our three impact areas of School Readiness, Financial Stability, and Connected Community inform our mission and vision.
The United Way of Greater Charlottesville connects our community, helping individuals and families to achieve their potential.
Serving a vibrant area that includes the City of Charlottesville and Counties of Albemarle, Fluvanna, Greene, Louisa, Nelson, and Orange provides us with a wide lens. This diversity allows for deep conversations and dialogues about the issues that affect our region as a whole and us as individual actors, and offers us spaces and vocabularies to tackle them head on.
Dear Friends,

It’s hard to believe that another year has passed. First and foremost, I want to thank our incredible community members, partners, and donors for your continued support of our work. Your time, treasure, and energy propelled us through a fast and furious year and has helped us maintain that momentum well into 2022.

A lot happened last year, and we’re excited for you to read through the report. But the two biggest highlights were that we officially launched Envision with a community block party at Ix Art Park. And, we were awarded a landmark Ready Regions grant to be the lead for the Blue Ridge Region, encompassing 21 localities, continuing our groundbreaking work in early education.

While the past year was one of great excitement and what we hope is progress we can continue to build on, it was also one of change, evolution, and learning.

We moved to the heart of downtown so our old home at 806 E. High could be used by the Financial Opportunity Center. We furthered our commitment to data, and the importance of making data-informed decisions about our programs and initiatives.

This data illustrates stark inequities in our community. Over 17% of families cannot afford the essentials of life, and 35% of those families are Black, despite making up only 11% of the population. We learned that a family with an annual income of $30,000 spends an average of 97% of their financial resources on housing, childcare, and transportation. That leaves only about $76 a month for everything else: food, clothing, diapers, and utilities, not to mention any emergency medical expenses and essentials like prescriptions.

This data speaks to the primacy of the Envision initiative, and the urgency with which we as a community must work to help lift our neighbors out of poverty, relying on the pillars of financial stability, school readiness, and connected community.

Envision will write a new narrative for Charlottesville, one that centers around its community members and their lived experiences. One that addresses historical and systems-level barriers to opportunity for minorities and people of color. One that reaches across sectors and joins together some of the most impactful individuals and organizations our area has to offer, bound by common goals, priorities, and purpose.

We’ve chosen Charlottesville as the place we work, play, and raise our children. Let’s live up to that “best place to live” moniker and work to create a community that is diverse, vibrant, and equitable. We’re not the best place to live, yet. But with your help, we can be.

Sincerely,

The number of people experiencing poverty in our community has remained relatively unchanged for a decade, despite $5 billion in regional economic growth.

Key Poverty Indicators

We understand that poverty is a multifaceted state of being, with many causes, a variety of detrimental outcomes, and no single clear cut solution.

Data demonstrates that there are also racial variations in poverty based on historical and systemic barriers, that it disproportionately affects people of color in our community and hinders their ability to scale and thrive.

Poverty impacts health and life expectancy, access to capital, homeownership and quality of housing, and education, especially infant and toddler care. With each step that an individual or family falls behind, it makes it that much harder and more complicated to make up ground towards being financially stable.

These issues are compounded for minorities, who are denied loans at 3x the rate of their White counterparts, own homes at half the rate, and live, on average, 7 years less. The first step in working to address poverty sustainably, and at scale, is understanding the complexity of the issue.

The Case for Support

The story’s title is ENVISION: A More Equitable Charlottesville. It’s unfolding in real time, and YOU can help script a path to equity and economic independence for all in our community, beginning now.

Charlottesville’s social sector is locking arms to help lift 1,800 families out of poverty—at least 630 of these families will be Black.

The story’s through-line is equity—as a determinant of economic mobility, wealth generation, and opportunities in education and community health. It’s about problem-solving through technology and human connections to achieve ambitious, time-bound goals. It’s an account of fortitude in refusing to accept old patterns of doing business.

It’s about acknowledging lived experiences backed by data and using this information to inform our decisions and actions. This data plainly demonstrates that the number of people experiencing poverty in our community has remained relatively unchanged for a decade, despite $5 billion in regional economic growth. That 17% of families in our region cannot afford the essentials of life, 35% of which are Black, despite comprising only 11% of the total population.

It’s about building and maintaining a first-of-its-kind collaborative framework among local organizations, bound by a shared commitment to providing coordinated services and eliminating barriers to enable economically-disadvantaged individuals and families to scale and thrive.

The combined force of these cohesive financial stability, school readiness, and connected community efforts will help catalyze transformational change in our community.

Strategic Plan

How does any of this hard work get done? What is the road map for achieving these goals?

This laser-focus on poverty and equity derives from a strategic planning process in 2019 with broad input from community stakeholders. This new era of innovation was furthered by our emergency response work during COVID-19. ENVISION’s goals were developed thereafter to affect systems-level change among economically-disadvantaged individuals and families through partner-driven collaboration with area nonprofits.

The common thread is each individual and organization leaning into what they do best. For us, it’s to be a unifying force that can bring our community and stakeholders together—volunteers, beneficiaries of services, nonprofit partners, community leaders, local government, and funders—to address the changing needs of Greater Charlottesville.

By being introspective as an organization, we were able to prioritize our strengths, and honestly assess areas in which we need to improve in order to authentically carry out our mission and vision. We have identified five pillars of action that will facilitate our success:

• Strengthen impact areas to improve operational excellence to better meet community needs;
• Establish United Way as a hub for community data collection around financial stability and school readiness;
• Change the United Way’s organizational culture around Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion internally and be an advocate for equity in our community;
• Strengthen partnerships that support our equity framework and Impact Areas; and
• Ensure sustainable funding for our work, supported by effective communication with clients, funders, and the community at large.
High-quality preschool can have a powerful impact on a child’s readiness for school and life. The Mixed Delivery Program allows for parent choice among high-quality options that meet the needs of their child and family. This program, now codified by Virginia as a sister program to the Virginia Preschool Initiative, works to address inequities in early education by increasing access and funding for preschool slots in private early care and education programs. UWGC was allocated 77 slots in FY22, and has been allocated 127 slots for the FY23 renewal period. New in FY23 is an Infant-Toddler Mixed Delivery Pilot funded by the VA Department of Education. UWGC is one of three organizations in the state selected for this pilot and has been allocated 75 of the 200 pilot slots.

FY22 PROGRAM STATISTICS

- $30,500 Median household income of a Mixed Delivery Program family
- 77% Percentage of students at or below 200% of federal poverty level

RACE/ETHNICITY BREAKDOWN

- 8% Asian
- 48% Black or African American
- 14% Hispanic or Latino
- 9% Multi/Bi-racial
- 19% White, not Hispanic
Virginia Kindergarten Readiness Program (VKRP)

In the 2021-2022 school year, the Virginia Kindergarten Readiness Program became available to all publicly-funded preschool programs to assess children’s skills in fall and spring. VKRP Pre-k assessments in Math, Self-Regulation, Social Skills and Emerging Literacy provide measures of growth and highlight opportunities for improvement. All of the Mixed Delivery providers are required to administer the assessments.

Our results demonstrated an overall increase of 14% in math scores, 4.5% in self-regulation scores, and a 3% increase in social skills scores and a 13.5% increase in PALS pre-k*. However, disaggregation of the data demonstrates disparities. For example, Black children excelled in literacy growth from fall to spring at a rate of 32.4%. White children only grew at a rate of 12.2%. However, the average fall score for White children was 51.74 but only 31.87 for Black children. The average spring score for White children was 58.04, but 42.2 for Black children. This same disparity is true for Black and White children across all of the assessments.

Having this information by classroom will allow teachers to see what children may need interventions or different teaching methodologies. Having this information by center will allow an organization to strategically plan in order to chip away at the disparities, and this is the type of data that VDOE and UWGC need to help make informed curricular decisions that will best meet the needs to each child.

*Aggregate pre-K literacy scores are obtained by summing across domains and excluding the following optional domains: letter sounds, lower-case alphabet, and nursery rhyme awareness.
Financial Resiliency Task Force

In 2019, UWGC convened Charlottesville-Albemarle’s first Financial Resiliency Task Force (FRTF) to make a significant impact on poverty through collaboration and coordination of partner services. Working together to remove barriers impacting the financial stability of individuals and families, FRTF partners provide a network of niche services—financial coaching, job training, early education and child care, and access to capital including UWGC’s Driving Lives Forward and Family Investment Program.

During FY22, UWGC procured technology and created the staff infrastructure to manage the initiative, including the ability to track and evaluate progress metrics via a shared Financial Resiliency Matrix that is embedded in the software. The software serves as a point-of-entry for clients and includes a closed referral loop among the partners. The partners signed an MOU agreeing on client eligibility, data sharing, and the closed referral procedures. The software launched late-August 2022 and the goal is to collectively serve at least 130 clients during FY23 towards the 1,800 families UWGC desires to lift to a point of financial stability. A second phase of software development will provide the data storage, tracking and reporting to demonstrate progress towards the UWGC five-year goal and individual program outcomes.

Families will be able to connect to financial coaching, home-ownership programs, early learning and child care programs/scholarships, market-rate auto loans for reliable used vehicles, the UWGC Family Investment Program, employment coaching/jobs and workforce programs.

No MBA grants awarded in FY22 (MBA COVID Assistance grant in FY21 and back to UWGC/MBA awards FY23)

Total FY22 Impact Grant Investment: $210,000  Total Grants Funded: 7  Total FY22 Beneficiaries: 1,937
In December 2021, UWGC was awarded the lead agency for Ready Region Blue Ridge, a geographic region covering 21 Virginia localities. The intent of Ready Regions is to bring access to early education to every child in Virginia regardless of race, ethnicity, economic status or place of residence. The Virginia Department of Education and the Virginia Early Childhood Foundation have oversight of the program.

UWGC’s initial tasks were to create a regional leadership team and prepare to pull all individually-funded Preschool Development Grant partners under one grant managed by UWGC effective July 1, 2022.

The PDG program is designed to roll out the State’s new quality rating improvement system—VQB5—to all publicly-funded classrooms, both public school system preschool classrooms and early education centers and family day homes that participate in the subsidy program. VQB5 uses the Classroom Assessment Scoring System (CLASS) methodology that measures teachers’ interactions with children. This methodology is mandated for publicly-funded classrooms effective school year 2023-2024.

UWGC participated in VQB5 practice year 1 by helping collect CLASS data that will help the VDOE better understand trends and plan ways to support local observers and leaders to ensure high quality pre-k instruction. 157 teacher observations were conducted along with professional development opportunities, a family survey and a coordinated enrollment assessment.

UWGC is now managing the region for practice year 2 along with 4 primary partners: ReadyKids Cville, JMU, Sentara RMH, and United Way of Staunton, Augusta County, Waynesboro. Next year, all of the Mixed Delivery grants will be combined into one that will be managed by UWGC. Effective with the 2023-2024 school year, UWGC will have access to the regional data to be able to prioritize opportunities for improvement across the numerous communities.

Early Learner Scholarships

- 38 scholarships were maintained for FY22
- 54 families benefitted from scholarships
- Average annual income less than $28,000
- 125% of the Federal Poverty Level

Cost of care continues to increase and continues to be exacerbated by COVID. Pre-COVID, the cost of infant care rose from $40+ per day to $50+per day. Now infant rates range from $55-$63/day with one provider recently increasing their rate to $73/day, costing families $14,300 to $16,380 per year. A single parent making $28,000 per year will pay 53%-60% of their annual income for infant care without financial assistance. Many parents resort to friends and family for child care, keeping their children out of the high quality environment that will help minimize the impact of living in poverty and help these children arrive at kindergarten better prepared to learn.

Coordinated Enrollment

UWGC developed its Coordinated Enrollment, or single-point-of-entry program, that was deployed in all public preschool programs in Charlottesville/Albemarle for the current school year. Applications for all 3 and 4 year-olds wanting to enroll in the Charlottesville or Albemarle School System’s public preschool programs, MACAA Head Start or the community Mixed Delivery program managed by UWGC were accepted and processed for eligibility through this online system last spring.

The single-point-of-entry allows a parent a convenient and efficient way to apply. In addition, navigators are available for parents who require assistance or who may have questions about the programs and eligibility. An intense engagement period commences in October/November prior to the application period opening the first of January. The goal is to fill all of the slots in each program so the maximum eligible 3 and 4 year-old children as can be are placed in a high-quality environment designed to assist the children improve their level of school readiness. In addition to our local go2growcville.com, the program was expanded to Augusta County on behalf of the United Way of Staunton, Augusta County, Waynesboro who adopted the same application and website as go2growsaw.com.

In Charlottesville/Albemarle, 1,162 applications were processed for School Year 22-23. This spring, 1,308 applications were processed for School Year 23-24. The median annual household income of enrolled families for SY22 is $24,289. 85% of enrolled families are at or below 200% of the federal poverty level. Coordinated enrollment collects important socio-economic data that provides insights into our community including but not limited to:

- Household income
- Parents' educational attainment
- Homelessness
- Foster care
- Transiency
- Refugee status
- Dual language learners
- IFSP, IEP, or speech/hearing/behavior concerns
- Parents under age 19 at birth of child
- Substance abuse in household
- Mental health concerns in household

All of these factors can help public school systems become more aware of the needs of these families prior to the children arriving at kindergarten.
Get to know the people who make our work possible and the community members who help further our mission every day.

Deborah Rogers
Early Education Specialist

How long have you been in Charlottesville?

Short answer, most of my life! I was born and raised in Charlottesville and graduated from CHS (a true Black Knight!). I met my husband after college and lived in New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Detroit before moving back to Charlottesville to be closer to family.

You were the executive director at Barrett Early Learning Center. Talk about the importance of early education for our youngest learners.

The first three years of a child’s life is a period of incredible growth and development and sets the stage for learning. When young children don’t get what their growing brains need to thrive, they can’t develop as they should, leading to life-long developmental, educational, social, and health challenges. At Barrett, we worked to create a nurturing environment for our young learners by focusing on safety, a trained staff, using curriculum/assessments, and strong teacher interaction with kids, to ensure that each child had the opportunity to be set up for success.

What are some of the most pressing challenges facing families with young children?

Lack of affordable, high-quality early childhood education, plain and simple. Especially for children of color. As we continue to contend with COVID child care is the lynchpin that also helps get our families back to work. It’s imperative we continue to support the early education workforce.

How can we help alleviate the skyrocketing cost of infant and toddler care for families?

The Mixed Delivery Infant and Toddler Grant will provide free tuition for the school year and summer for children ages 0-3 at a high-quality private provider (two
Donor Spotlight

Court Nexsen
United Way Donor and Leadership United Co-Founder

How did you get involved with United Way?
I've always felt a sense of responsibility to give back to the community and make a positive impact, but it was ultimately a neighbor who opened the door for me. Working for the United Way gives me the opportunity to go back into the communities that gave me so much.

How did Leadership United come together?
We landed on the idea as a way for younger United Way donors to be a part of something bigger than their individual philanthropy. We wanted to find a way to get our children involved, so we incorporated the whole family. It's been great watching the group grow into its collaborative approach and provide children access to community involvement.

Where do you see United Way going in the future?
Charlottesville is such a magical place. It also has needs and desires that provide an opportunity for people to drive resources and energy toward. My impression is that the people who are involved with United Way care deeply about making Charlottesville the best version of itself. Over the past six years, I've seen an increased intentionality about what United Way is doing and how we're doing it, and I'm looking forward to continuing to be a part of that.

Undertold Stories

We worked to help tell stories that are often under-told and build a platform for new voices in our community.

ENVISION RADIO
We recorded over 70 episodes of Envision Radio, an interview program and podcast that highlights Black business, government, nonprofit, and community leaders while exploring issues of race and equity. Twice, we even took the show on the road: Envision LIVE events brought together past participants, United Way board members, Leadership United, and community stakeholders for interviews with a live audience—and a hot lunch or cold cocktail in-hand, thanks to our gracious hosts at Common House and Vault Virginia. Find us on your favorite streaming app, or catch the latest episode airing on NewsRadio WINA 98.9FM and AM1070 Saturday mornings at 7am.
How did you get involved with United Way?

Through my work at Albemarle County, I saw United Way operate as a convener, thought leader, and policy advocate in our community. That experience deepened my understanding of the values, ethic, and direction of the organization. When I was invited to join the board, I knew that it wasn’t on the basis of trying to put a particular type of body in a seat—but because United Way has a vision and practice that is driven by impact.

What are the most pressing challenges our community is facing?

There seems to be no end to the pressing challenges, from housing, to climate change, to systemic racism—but I think one of the most significant barriers to addressing any of these challenges is our appetite and capacity for radical change. I don’t get the sense that United Way has lost its appetite at all. That’s what we need: leaders who aren’t afraid to take big swings at problems that are seen as intractable.

What is your hope for the community data resources that United Way is building through ENVISION?

I hope they are useful; and used. I hope we can prioritize connection, partnership, and engagement in such a way that community members feel the tools we create are of and for them, as well as something they are able to use to take action.

Is there anything else you would like to share?

I’d like to emphasize the importance of continuing to extend the invitation and opportunity to the broader community to act as accountability partners. Everyone should feel that they have a stake in the achievement of United Way’s goals, especially regarding poverty reduction in the local community.

We also produced the first edition of our coloring book, recognizing the importance of engaging our youngest learners in the conversation about their hometown and its history. Each page provides a short anecdote about this history of places and spaces in and around Charlottesville.

Did you know the history of the 3rd street entrance of the Paramount Theater? How about the legacy of Benjamin Tonsler, the namesake of Tonsler Park? Part of building equity in our community comes from engaging our neighbors of all ages in connecting to our past, our present, and to our brighter future.

Kizzy Walker
Family Investment Program Participant

A native of Charlottesville and single mother of three children—a daughter in her 20’s, a son in high school, and an 8-year-old daughter—Kizzy grew up surrounded by a loving family: siblings, aunts, uncles, cousins, grandparents. Yet, now, only Kizzy, her kids, and her father remain in town. Everyone else moved away.

Kizzy dropped out of high school when her older daughter was born. In 2013, she earned her GED with the goal of getting a certificate in medical billing and coding. She completed the coursework but didn’t have enough money to pay for the exam.

Nonetheless, Kizzy was determined to find a “forever” home in Charlottesville. “I’m not going to give up. This is my home and I’m going to fight to stay,” she told City Council members at a public meeting advocating for affordable housing. In 2018, while living in a single room with her two younger children, she applied for the Pathways to Housing program offered by Habitat for Humanity. With financial coaching and regular payments on auto and student loans, Kizzy’s credit score improved, and she was able to advance to Habitat’s home ownership program.

In 2020, Kizzy joined UWGC’s Family Investment Program. With her Habitat coach, she established a plan that included UWGC matched savings for a home down payment. UWGC also supported Kizzy with the money she needed for the medical coding/billing certification test and a laptop required for her son’s virtual learning. Kizzy was one of the first participants in UWGC’s Driving Lives Forward program, and as a result, established an affordable line of credit on a reliable used vehicle.

Thanks to the coordinated efforts of UWGC and Charlottesville’s social impact sector and her own force of will, in March 2021, Kizzy purchased her newly constructed 3-bedroom Habitat home. She works full-time cleaning rooms at a hotel and has started her own residential cleaning business to earn extra income. With Kizzy’s enthusiasm as a participant in ENVISION, there is little doubt she will continue her success as she works to set and accomplish new goals!

VIRGINIA FILM FESTIVAL

We also partnered with the 2021 Virginia Film Festival as a premiere sponsor of their 34th annual event.

During the festival, we sponsored five films and debuted our Envision trailer to audiences.
We’re proud to work alongside committed individuals and organizations to create sustainable positive change in our community.

Day of Caring
The United Way Day of Caring is the largest annual single day of service in our community, and one of the largest in the nation. This event brings critical services to local nonprofits and schools, and introduces hundreds of community members to volunteering.

In 2021 we celebrated the 30th annual Day of Caring, an occasion marked by very heavy rain—the first-ever rainy Day of Caring—which did not deter the volunteers, though some creative adaptations were required.
Caring for Community Awards
A partnership with C-Ville Weekly and Leadership United, the Caring for Community Awards recognize exceptional community service from individuals, families, businesses, and organizations. In 2021 we were pleased to institute the Volunteer of the Year Award.

Black Business Guide
In collaboration with the Charlottesville Area Chamber of Commerce Minority Business Alliance, City of Charlottesville Office of Economic Development, and Destinee Wright, former Community Fellow-in-Residence at The Equity Center at UVA, we were able to build on what Destinee began in 2018 as the Charlottesville Black Business Directory and launch the Black Business Guide, a comprehensive digital resource intended to provide visibility for Black-owned and operated businesses and their services. The guide was launched in April 2022 as a part of the 10th annual Tom Tom Festival and continues to grow as new businesses open and are incorporated into the catalogue.

Envision Community Block Party
On a crisp October evening at Ix Art Park, the Envision Community Block Party brought together over 250 community members to celebrate the launch of Envision.

The feeling of positivity was palpable, and the diversity of the crowd was an inspiration. With live music from Free Union and Elise Underwood, dinner by Angelic’s, Basan, Sombrero’s, and Pearl Island (who distributed close to 150 free kids’ meals), and a fundraising raffle that featured contributions from 9 members of the Charlottesville Area Chamber of Commerce Minority Business Alliance, the stage was set—United Way’s work in the coming years would be defined by its inclusivity and ability to be driven by the community it serves.

Partners in the Envision initiative including Financial Resiliency Task Force members City of Promise, Habitat for Humanity of Greater Charlottesville, Network2Work@PVCC, and New Hill Development Corporation joined the festivities to share about the programs they offer as a part of this new community collaboration to reduce poverty.

We debuted Color Cville—United Way’s first-ever coloring book, featuring contributions from local photographer Eze Amos and illustrator Mara Sprafkin—and introduced a limited-edition beer collaboration with the Brewnited Way: the Envision Lager.

We co-sponsored the Community Workshop series, and Price A. Thomas, our Director of Marketing, hosted a segment at Common House about storytelling, using Envision Radio as a case study. He talked about how to frame and create a content initiative and also conducted live interviews with Martize Tolbert of the Fountain Fund, and Eric Mayberry of The Daily Progress.

WAYS TO GIVE

Support Envision and the United Way of Greater Charlottesville in creating a more equitable community where every person can thrive.

There are a variety of ways to make your contribution to the United Way of Greater Charlottesville, and support us in our work of creating more equitable communities.

Volunteer

Our Volunteer Center can create customized volunteer opportunities for individuals, families, companies, and other groups, and we are happy to guide you on your volunteer journey. Contact us directly, or visit our CvilleVolunteer.org site, which lists ongoing, one-time, and emergency volunteer needs, and allows you to register your areas of interest to help you find the opportunity that’s right for you. Also check out www.ReImagineCVA.org for other ways to get involved.

Fund the Vision

Help us ENVISION a better community by donating today. Our EIN# is 54-0505882, and we accept gifts in a variety of ways:
• Mail checks to:
  United Way
  200 Garrett St., Ste. I
  Charlottesville, VA 22902
• Stocks and Securities
• Employer matched gifts
• Wills, estates, trusts made as a planned gift
• Automatic payroll deduction through your employer
• Online gifts: UnitedWayCville.org
• Text to give: text "Envision" to 24365
• Cryptocurrency

Get Involved!

For over 75 years, the United Way of Greater Charlottesville has convened people, companies, the University, foundations, social services, schools, and other organizations to work together to strengthen our community. There are many ways to get involved, including:
• Serve on a committee or board.
• Provide an Employer Matching Program to maximize the positive impact of your organization’s commitment to our community.
• Be a Sponsor of United Way events or activities to get double the exposure with event advertising and promotions for popular and well-attended community activities.
• Create a volunteer team for our annual Day of Caring.

Plan Ahead

At any age, donors may support the United Way of Greater Charlottesville through financial or estate planning. To learn more or to make a gift, please contact the United Way Development Office at 434.972.1701, or send an email to UWGCDvelopment@unitedwaycville.org.
